THE Singapore Free Press, in drawing at. tention to a recent letter by Mr. Howard LIVEBEY to the Times on corporal punishment as a crime cure, recalls some remarks tice of the Straits Settlements on whipping. Sir Thomas Sidgreaves thought that the extension of this form of punishment would tead towards diminishing the prevalence of crime and the increase in the number of criminals. He said :- "I am quite sure that by the extention of the power of whipping we should be able to meet the criminals on more equal terms. They do not care very much for our imprisonment. They come from their equalid homes, where they do not know of such a thing as ventilation, and if there is any they exclude it. They come into our prisons, and with regular diet, restraint from bad habits, and perhaps deprivation of opium, they come out in better con dition than they went in, and are the envy of their honest neighbours, -eo-that for six weeks or two months the gaol is to som the rattan more mequently made use of, the very much diminished aiso." Even where discipline is severe it does as a deterrent to the extent that flogging would, for the reason that its pain does not present itself in such a vivid form to the imagination as the pain of corporal punishment. Every one knows what the latter means, but with a criminal sentenced to a short term of imprisonment for the first time, the prevailing pentiment as he enters the gaol is very probably one of simple curiosity; and that imprisonment is not an effective deterrent is proved by the fre- be an accomplished fact, do not think it can be quent convictions of the same individual. Modern seatiment is averse to flogging on account of its supposed brutality, but this is because it is judged of by instances of its abuse rather than of its use. In former times flogging was inflicted in a brutal spirit the Nippon Yusen Kaisha for docking its shi of revenge; with the growth of a more bumane sentiment a regulation took place and, fair profits are expected. A special commit corporal punishment is now looked upon with great disfavour. There are indications, however, of a modification of that disfavour being in progress, and of a recognition of the proper use of whipping springing up Our Singapore contemporary aprly re marks that as all medicines may be deadly poisons when taken in excess, so the remedial punishment of whipping becomes, if carried to excess, an evil no less culpable than the crime it professes to grapple will What has to be avoided is, not the use, but the excess. Mr. Livesey disposes of the humanitarian objection that the punishmen is degrading by the observation that it i the crime, and not the nature of the retribution for crime, which degrades. The argument is summarised to the following effect. Corporal punishment is the most natural, scriptural, and effective. The offender alone suffers for his sin, whereas at present, by the imprisonment of the bread winner, the punishment is really borne by the wife and children of the offender. With the filled by the eldest associate and a new associate substitution of this form of punishment for imprisonment crimé would be decreased, jails would become sparsely occupied

But there are other causes at work which also account for the enhanced rate of tennage. men have not been tempted to put their money into steamship property, and shipowners generally have found but little encouragement to extend their operations. On the other hand, the number of vessels lost or rendered unserviceable through age during the last few years has been very considerable, and it now appears that there are barely enough steamers in existence to carry on the trade of the world. The ship-building yards are all in full swing, actively labouring to meet the demand, and good employment will thus be found this winter for thousands of willing hands. Steamers are tur ed

For the suther of " Modern Painters," and "Fors Clavigera" is far too good critic to throw Shakespeare overboard altogether just because of this one alleged defect; in ad miration of Stratford-on-Avon's lien Mr. Ruskin is perfectly certain to be behind nobody in the world. Yet there it is this blot on heroines who never labour, who are not lowly, who like preserving their complexions, and who have the crowning defect of being "dakes" dang h ters at the least." In contrast to Shakespeare Mr. Ruskin quotes the example of Scott, an old friend of his, who has given us in Jeannie Desns a heroine who is recognised as being about as perfect a type of woman as could b found, and who after all is a mere Scotch pea sant lassie, who thought it no disgrace to milk On Paris,old Scotch fashion. Let it not be hastily assumed, however, Mr. Ruskin's view of feminine perfection is that it involves either the driving or the filling of manure carts. Far from it. He simply gives us to understand that in this work-a-day world it is impossible for young women to sit still and do nothing, and also that, if that were possible, it would not be good for them, either physically or morally. Under the brisk competition that would have ensued, these Tyrolese or Bernese maidens might have become just a little vain; and then they would have lost some o that claim to perfection which their champion has made in their behalf. In fact, the supply of the feminine commodity would, with all respect to Professor Ruskin, have been unequal to the demand. It may be true that the best women do what Mr. Ruskin describes-master their passions, instead of allowing the reverse process to take place. Yet what bwiss maiden, either her grape growing and her milking and her marure-cart-filling to go off with a wealthy and high-born suitor from a foreign strand? We believe that under such circumstances the Swiss bargain, and that she would take as much care of her complexion when transferred to cities as Resalind ever oid in the Forest of Arden. In l fact, human nature is much alike in women all Ruskin is quite correct in wishing as to believe

Author of "King Solomon's Mines," "Allan Quartermain," "She," "Jess," &c., &c. The Proprietors of this Journal are pleased to announce that they have, at a very considerable outlay, made arrangements with H. RIDER HAGGARD-the Author of the most popular and dramatic Stories of our day-by which their Readers will enjoy precedent perusal of a new and unpublished manuscript Story from his pen. The Title of RIDER HAGGARD'S New Story is COLONEL QUARITCH, V.C. And the Opening Chapters appeared in THE "HONGRONG DAILY PRESS" OF SATURDAY, 21st JULY.

In this dramatic work, the author of "She makes a new departure. Instead of placing his characters in lands remote from civilization and subjecting them to influences of the most re markable and unprecedented nature, he has here written an English treasure story of the present day. The hero is a soldier in the British army.

NOW ON SALE. IMPERIAL QUARTO. RIGHTONARY DICTIONARY DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN Pronunciation. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins. and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work the following facts are submitted for consideration:— Chalmers Vocabulary contains about 16.000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the quires examples to display the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which this work contains more than five times as

A DRAMATIST OF TO DAY. Being of an inquiring turn of mind and baving nothing better to do, I thought I might get some amusement the other night from a well-known dramatist with whom I was staying, by putting some leading questions to him in regard to his first-night sensations. Porhaps it may be as well to explain at the outset, however, that this was done with no thought of elucidating any principles of art or for anything more than the satisfaction of a very ordinary curiosity. If I have any serious thought about the stage at all, is that all "canons of art," dramatic criticism, histrionic psychology, and such things are entirely useless to a spectator who never by any chance goes near the theatre-save for the exclusive purpose of Ivory Miniatures of Superior Quality and finding enjoyment and amusement. The of Excellent and High Finish. PERMANENT anodyne that Mr. Andrew Lang finds in a ENLARGEMENTS of PHOTOS, and VIEWS and novel I seek in a play. And that makes one reproductions of the same on Paper, Canvas, or good-natured-encourages one, as little Mr. | Opal. Foker would say, to give a fellow a hand no matter though he may be tearing a passion to tatters or delivering a good jest with the grace of Sir William Harcourt in his lighter momenta. Curiously enough, though the reflection is an obvious one when pointed out, it had never struck me that not every dramatist is about to take a slap on the check with the undisturbed equanimity of Fielding or Charles Lamb, or judge his own work with the stern justice of La Fontaine, who not only swore to an unknown lady that his play was bad but claimed that he ought to know, seeing he Dressing Tables and Marele Tor Washhad made it bimself. If any other view of the question has struck me, it was that dramatists have a very singular habit of misinterpreting the sentiments of the audience. Often this takes the form of blaming the actors for distorting the parts; but it is more amusing when it finds expression in a discovery of enthusiasm where none exists ... as, for example, in the case of George Mitchell. When his "Union of the Clane" was brought on the stage by Wilkes, it was for several nights a conundrum to the London audience, who neither could catch the names or understand the allusions. At last they broke out into what in parliamentary reports are called ironical cheers, framing, as one might say, a brilliantly surcastic commentary on the silly performance. The manager was in despair, but not so the campy Scotch author; " Deit
